Module aims

This module aims to provide learners with a knowledge and critical understanding of international practices, developments and trends within human resource management. Learners can expect to work independently and collaboratively to develop critical thinking skills, problem solving and decision-making, and commercial drive to draw meaningful conclusions to key international business and HRM issues. Learners will engage with current thinking and research of international human resource management including intercultural management and comparative approaches to HRM in selected countries.

Module Learning Outcomes - at the end of this module, students will be able to:

1	Critically compare international HRM concepts and theories
2	Critically evaluate the role of HRM practices within an international context.
3	Critically analyse contemporary debates and emerging issues in the field of International HRM,
4	Identify and critically discuss the significance of ethical issues in HRM practices, and the management of people in the workplace.
5	Examine the implications of increasing globalisation and its impact on HRM, both nationally and internationally.

Assessment

Learning and Teaching Strategies

The overall learning and teaching strategy is one of guided independent study, in the form of distance learning requiring ongoing student engagement. On-line material will provide the foundation of the learning resources, to support a blended approach, requiring the students to log-in and engage on a regular basis throughout the eight-week period of the module. Students learning will be consolidated via integrated formative and summative assessment tasks in the form of two essays and final report addressing HRM in an international context.

There will be a mix of recorded lectures and supporting notes/slides, containing embedded digital content and self-checks for students to complete as they work through the material and undertake the assessment tasks. The use of a range of digital tools via the virtual learning environment together with additional sources of reading will also be utilised to accommodate learning styles. There is access to a help-line for additional support and chat facilities through Moodle for messaging and responding
